RT 21/2/89

Interviewed at YOUTH CLUB. JILL had come down, I think on [YOUTH WORKERS] request, specifically to do the questionnaire. Despite this she seemed rather hostile and made me feel a bit uneasy, I got quite a strong feeling of a chip on her shoulder. JILL used to work at the youth club and was in her element there. She was quite consciously undermining whatever authority I had tried to conjure up to legitimate being there.

Small, dark very fit looking young woman who comes over immediately as being tough, together and intelligent. As soon as we started talking I realised that she was very bright but also very proud. She was in fact extremely interested in what we were doing and summed up the theoretical basis of the project in her first few sentences. We had a good chat, she relaxed a bit and started telling me about more personal things. It was a good interview, especially in terms of how the demands of Safe Sex clash with hopes of women's sexual emancipation etc. Since then have talked to JILL a number of times and she has been very helpful by giving out the questionnaire to her friends etc. but doesn't like to give the impression that she is keen or wants to help us. Asked her to do a diary and she agreed, I was surprised but very pleased.
