

Dear Readers,

Welcome to the first newsletter. I'd like to introduce ourselves, and explain our reasons for starting this newsletter and what we hope to achieve.

We are a diverse group of women loosely connected to the Women's Place, Quay Co-op. We came together with the aim of producing a newsletter because it was felt to be an effective way of presenting relevant news items and listings of coming events and activities, as well as providing an open forum for discussion and information exchange where any woman can share her views or ideas.

We felt that a newsletter like this could provide a useful service by reaching women more directly and providing a medium through which we can share in the resources discussions and ideas of other women living in this area.

It is also the intention of this newsletter to promote the Women's Library and Information Service situated in the Women's Place, Quay Co-op. To this end, every issue will include some reviews of books from the library which will hopefully interest more women in the large selection of factual and fictional books available on loan.

Our editorial policy is basically that we will print anything that you send us as long as it's not more than 350 words (due to space limitations), is not a personal attack on an individual, does not oppress any group, and it reflects the views of women in the Cork area and beyond. No editing will be done except for clarification purposes with the consent of the writer.

We therefore invite the participation of any woman who would like to contribute an article, a letter, a cartoon or a piece of poetry on any topic of interest. Please include name address and telephone number.

Due to a lack of distribution outlets, we are also asking women to subscribe on a yearly basis. A postal subscription will ensure you receive your up-to-date issue delivered to your door. (see back page for subscription rates). We hope you enjoy this issue, will support this newsletter and make it yours!

A TALE OF WOMANTALENT

Women, women everywhere!

So it seemed to me, as Cork's turn to play hostess to the Women's News (Belfast) Women's Place (Cork) Co-operation North Exchange coincided with a meeting of the Lesbian Line Collectives of Ireland, January 29 - 31.

The organisers of both events pooled their efforts to plan a joint social on the Saturday night for the entertainment of both host women and guest women.

Taking advantage of a newly varnished dance floor, our feet willy-nilly obeyed the magic of Mary O'Sullivan's (Dublin) ceilidh tunes on the box, until we collectively ran out of breath, at which point she relented and sang us some of her well-loved songs about our Irish foremothers.

Marie Mulholland (Belfast) followed with her wild and powerful renditions of "blues-type" ??? songs (I hesitate to type Marie's songs.) Just when we thought the evening was over, we were surprised and delighted to be treated to a display of fire-juggling by Jackie (Belfast). Which goes to show how much fun can be made when a group of women gets together!

AND, by the way, it also goes to show that it's high time for all Cork women to start polishing up all those talents rusting away in the back cupboards!

"Lack of opportunity" do I hear you explain? Never worry. How would you like to strut your stuff in the friendly atmosphere of a women's performance night, Three Ones Bar, Barrack Street (Tues. 8 March, and thereafter the first Tuesday of each month)?

Or, if your ambitions have a more international flavour, why not do a turn at the Women's Fun Weekend Cabaret, attended by women from all over Ireland as well as many parts of Britain and the Continent?

A NEW LINE!

Co-OPERATION NORTH

THE CO-OP NORTH EXCHANGE STORY

An intrepid explorer named Nikki set off from Cork one Saturday of shoppers and the promises of the week-end. It probably passed unnoticed by most people, but for a few it was a day to remember.

On Friday evening there was a steady trickle of women arriving to the City, all with the same motive. Under cover of scarves, hats and gloves (for it was a cold night) they made their way to the Bar, where a welcome of old and new friendships awaited. There was a tangible excitement in the air.

By Saturday lunch-time a large group of these women had gathered in a room that had a fire blazing and chairs laid out. Pretty soon, things were in full swing, with discussion and anecdotes wafting around the room with the cigarette smoke.

"Remember that guy in Tale-com? How do you spell Leibin?" "What about going in the Bank and the clerks gather twittering around the book, casting sidelong glances at 'one of them'."

"It's terrible not having fun-same, few for support," "How do you deal with men on the Line?" "What about silent call?"

After a break of coffee and Custard Pies it was time for some decisions and assessment "So we'll place an advertisement and divide the cost between us."

"What about getting funding to arrange training sessions for us all?" Women sounds like a good idea.

Then there was time given to working on some counselling skills, concentrating on "listening." They mixed around to pair with someone not so familiar.

"Remember not to look at or touch each other - as you're meant to be on the telephone."

With thoughts of the evening ahead creeping in, it all wound down. Women drifted off in search of food, rest and drink.

"See you later, Eighth!" So what was it? The first National Lesbian Line Conference. Who was there? Women from Cork, Belfast, Dublin and Galway Lesbian Lines. It was definitely a success.

FOSTERING

From media reports it would appear that there are many children requiring loving families, particularly teenagers and handicapped children. This has prompted me to write about my experience as foster mother.

I am an ordinary everyday mother of two boys and one girl. I thought it would be nice to foster a girl long-term as a sister for my own daughter. I applied to the Southern Health Board, was interviewed, assessed and accepted. I now have five years fostering experience. We were very excited about a child coming to stay. We waited, finally the telephone rang, "Would we take two girls short-term, while their mother was in hospital?" Rooms were checked, beds made, two lovely red-headed girls arrived. Our very first foster children. I was a bit nervous but I soon got over it. It was a great experience for my family.

Our next arrivals were three children (my family doubled) to stay for three weeks, which turned out to be three months. Oh! The unpredictability of fostering! These children were very loving and were well accepted in the neighbourhood. We all experienced a mixture of sadness at their parting and gladness at their being re-united with their parents.

Next came my current long-term foster son of three years standing. An adorable blue-eyed baby boy. (Note: I had applied for a little girl.) He was sick a lot to begin with. At one stage my youngest son were in the Regional Hospital together. "It never rains but it pours." He is now a fine healthy child and very much part of the family.

The next girl was a real challenge, an advanced eleven-year-old, with a mind of her own, something akin to an unbroken pony! She had many real personal problems. Her constant desire was to be lucky, after three months with my family, her mother was in a position to care for her.

If you love children and have room for one or two more why not become a foster parent?

HANDYWOMEN

"I didn't expect a woman..." How many of us have lived in grotty, badly converted flats, a quietly crumbling house, and have learned all sorts of strange things while battling to sink the rising damp, re-paper the steam-curled bathrooms, or replace the sash window that fell into the yard?

One thing you learn is that although you may be very good at one, two, even three essential home construction skills, have a working knowledge of another, and a passing acquaintance with yet another, there are always several that are out of your orbit. So you call in the expert in plumbing, upholstering or atomic physics if you can afford him, it is almost always a him!

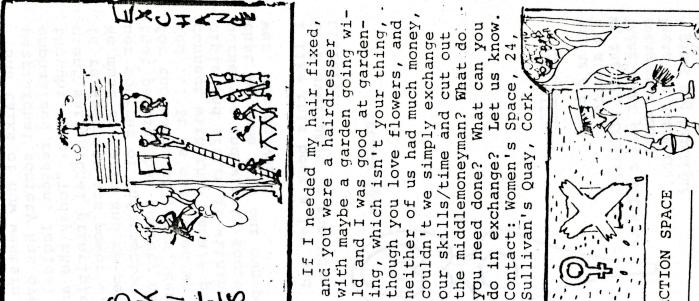

The Plumber was great - did the job, didn't laugh at eccentric planning, didn't over-charge and didn't ask leading questions about my marital status. Not like the gas repair man. He created three to one in leaks, fired off a stream of sexual innuendos, and fell over his (repair) equipment in his anxiety to prove that he was a cross between Schwarzenegger and Casanova. He did himself a nasty injury on the corner of the kitchen unit and went off in a huff muttering things about "unnatural women".

The electrician who rewired the flat and blew an innocent E.S.B. man off his stool sticks in my mind too. If all this sounds rather familiar, next question, have you ever found yourself wishing you could call on a woman to do the job you can't?

I think women have a better "feel" for living/working spaces than most men, a better eye for detail and more empathy with the harassed client. And they're less likely to ask said client, male or female, for a kiss on completion!

These women do exist, highly qualified, skilled or semi-skilled. You may be one of them. Are you interested in getting a skills register together, exchanging experiences working together? If you are, contact the newsletter.

Upon her return to the women's place Collective in Cork she decided she had to find a way to bring the women of both collectives together. So she thought and researched and proposed, until finally it was done. The women's place (Cork)/Women's Place (Belfast) Co-operation North Exchange had been approved!

Women from both collectives met and decided that it would be a good thing if the women of Women's News could teach the Cork women the intricate skills of producing a newspaper so that the Cork women could start one, and a good thing if the women of the Women's Place could teach the Belfast women the delicate art of running a library, so that they could start one.

The Belfast women returning the compliment in January 1988. News-Paper workshops and library workshops were organised and areas of future co-operation were discussed, life-long vows of friendship were made and LOTS of fun was had by all.

REVIEW

MOTHERWIT - A Feminist Guide to Psychic Development.
by Diane Mariechild.

It's a really good book. I find myself constantly going to it for ideas for guided meditations, healing exercises, affirmations.

Diane Mariechild is a psychic and feminist psychotherapist. The book contains practical exercises to help develop your natural psychic and healing abilities. She asks you to try things out and decide for yourself what you want to take or leave. She writes in a personal and easy to read style.

There are some beautiful relaxation exercises, especially if you have someone to read them out to you. She has included lots of different guided meditations to enable us to get in touch with our own inner wisdom, and to increase our awareness of different aspects of ourselves. She writes about dreams, creative visualisations, witchcraft, psychic skills for children, auras, chakras and loads more.

The chapter on Healing lists some common ailments and their common associations which is useful in trying to discover what your sickness is related to e.g. shoulder problems - feeling like you carry the weight of the world on your shoulders. She talks about healing as a process of discovering where your energy is blocked and learning ways to unblock it and she goes through different ways to do this.

There's a chapter on using affirmations, symbols and creative visualisation to become more powerful in our own lives. Throughout the book she shows how we have lots more power over our health and lives than we often think we have and at the same time she shows a good awareness of our experiences as women.

She talks of how western, patriarchal society has over-emphasised reason, logical thought, etc. "Today the ancient matriarchal principle is reasserting its power ... We must re-learn and re-member sources of information that patriarchal society has, for thousands of years, denied ... It is only when we re-connect with this female principle and affirm it within ourselves and within society that we come into our own power, womanpower."

I like this book a lot and it's available in the Women's Library.

THE BITCH

You're a bitch
I'm a bitch
We are all bitches.
There's not just a witch in everywoman today,
There's a bitch too,
A great big beautiful bitch.
I will keep her in my big soft round belly where she will be warm & safe & loved where she will be part of me.
I can stick her out whenever I want & know that I am a beautiful, caring,
Knowing loving Goddess with a beautiful bitch in my belly.
My mother also has a big fat belly. She keeps it inside her corset but I've seen it sometimes.
So, from one big fat belly to another, Hi Mum.
